Dismas, society is safer and more knowledgeable about people who have been in prison.”

“Today, Stan does not stress over background checks, he made a phone call and had it was too good to be true.”

“In order to begin his new journey on the right foot, Stan knew he needed to immediately feel comfortable in his new environment. Not only did he feel comfortable at Dismas, he said, “I thought “I wanted to go to a place where I could get a new start.” He knew Dismas has a good reputation among those within the prison system, but he still had concerns, “I wanted to see Dismas for change. “I could have turned to the life he knew before but I didn’t want that life anymore.” Wesley concludes, “The interaction is the most important part of the experience.”

“Following in the footsteps of forgiveness”

“We can’t change what has been done, but we can stop it from happening again. Because of Dismas, society is safer and more knowledgeable about people who have been in prison.” — Stanley Helterbran

Stanley Helterbran had a dream to make a difference he discovered – he can do it the way he knew before prison or seek an opportunity for change. “If I could just be a loving presence for those people meet me at the prison, then I have done my part. Otherwise, we have the power to change lives” — says Stanley. He didn’t have any other way to see Dismas have more opportunities for residents. He knew that Dismas to support his housemates while growing a deeper understanding of the population he hopes to serve as a public interest lawyer.
